HOW THIS ADVENTURE BEGAN

The Editorial Board that founded this journal met for the first time in El Escorial (Spain) in April 2011. Almost a year earlier, the first contact between FERE-CECA, Interred and Intermón-Oxfam was initiated to promote the dawning of this long-term project on education research in Development Education.

For two days, we discussed and defined the issues we had already considered and suggested during the months prior to that time by email, video conference and other means. But 21st-century advanced communication technology could not surpass the excitement and delicate tension of our first face-to-face meeting between people from different countries, with diverse backgrounds and personal experiences.

With all this, the people present, sent and supported by our organisations, and their rich, complex history and accompanying identities, we got down to work. Our mission was actually to create a Town Square, rather than a Wall, which is what we feel existed previously.
